Asking Photoshop to heal The Content-Aware (Smart) Healing tool is a useful addition to your arsenal. If you want to eliminate minor defects in your image, but don't want to ruin your original art, the Content-Aware (Smart) Healing tool is a good substitute. As Figure 2-9 shows, the Smart Healing tool is a small arrowhead tool that, when positioned over the offending area, shows you the thumbnail of the best selection from any of the other tools (such as the Burn or Dodge) on your screen. You then use the arrow on the right of the tool to select the appropriate source. If the thumbnail is not visible, you can hover over the portion of the image you want to use as a source. Then simply drag the Smart Healing tool to the area you want to use and release it. Figure 2-10 shows the image after using this tool on the spot of a hair that was too short. ## What's New in the Adobe Photoshop 2021 (Version 22.1.0)?

Come Monday morning when the news media begins reporting on the results of the Jan. 26 Iowa caucuses, expect Hillary Clinton, the Democrat front-runner, to complain loudly that the numbers have been rigged. But the truth is, the Clinton campaign, with its millions, is far more sophisticated about Iowa politics than the surging Bernie Sanders campaign. First, the Bernie campaign is covering up its airbrushing of

Mr. Sanders' photo from some of his campaign ads. A Bernie campaign flier buried in the New York Times on Friday was found to be riddled with Photoshop-gerrymandered images. Sanders is the wrong candidate to bring up an alleged rigging of the caucuses because he has mastered the art of explaining away bad news. As the New York Post reported, a Sanders staffer accused Hillary of using an app to fake an Iowa caucus after Clinton staffers reported two such apps were used at caucus sites. While the Bernie campaign's Iowa numbers don't seem as close as they were last time in 2008 when, with the help of the reliable Ames paper, the Iowa Democratic Party got its numbers right down the road, they are closer than the Clinton campaign could possibly let on. Now the real question is, does the Iowa Democratic Party's app or the caucus counting app have ties to the Sanders campaign? And if so, will the Sanders campaign disclose this? This being a new app, has anyone checked its reputation, its licensing, its authenticity or the source of its funds? The Sanders campaign will not make any moves when they have a chance to win big, so they will not get to the bottom of the Iowa Caucus debacle and what it might reveal about the Clinton campaign and the DNC. But the Iowa Democratic Party has to know by now that some of its applications and counting software was leaked and used without permission by the Sanders campaign. If this is true, the party cannot keep this debacle hidden for very long. And if the Sanders campaign is using this app to steal the Democratic vote, expect its caucus numbers to lie low on Monday. New Hampshire is next in the Democratic race and the first in the nation-by-nation free and fair primary. And the Sanders camp seems confident that New Hampshire will be a victory. The New Hampshire polls show Clinton up by 30-40 points and the polls are usually correct. Then come Nevada and South Carolina, the
